The New Look: Low-Key LUSH

Kimberlee Keswick and Paul Robbins of KeswickRobbins are in favor of a harmonious approach to garden design. Indeed, this green team is known for creating landscapes that complement architecture and care for the environment. Says Robbins, "Our plant and tree selections are based on creating shade and conserving water, and suiting the existing structure. Let's face it: Tropical gardens were a fad. Olive trees and lavender are much more conducive to the majority of California's architecture and climate." A recently completed project in Hancock Park (pictured below) is the perfect showcase: One-third of the grass was eliminated in favor of boxwood to border wild lavender and frame the Mediterranean exterior. When not busy with the landscaping arm of their business, Keswick and Robbins focus on their line of outdoor furniture and planters. Favored by the likes of Waldo Fernandez and Suzanne Rheinstein, the collection includes pieces in a wide range of materials, from aluminum to European white oak, and is finished in a custom palette of colors. 323-935-0888; keswickrobbins.com. ANDREA STANFORD
